Irrigation training for workers and irrigation managers is being offered as a Spanish-language only workshop. We will cover basic principles to help irrigators understand some of the science behind the art of irrigation. The target crop is tomato, but the principles of irrigation will apply to other crops.

The goal is for participants to:

1. Gain information about crop water requirements
2. Understand the amount of water applied
3. Match the application with the crop requirement
4. Measure soil moisture

Taught by University of California Cooperative Extension Farm Advisors:
Michael Cahn, Irrigation and Soils Advisor, Monterey County
Luis Espino, Farm Advisor, Colusa, Glenn and Yolo counties
Gene Miyao, Farm Advisor, Yolo, Solano, and Sacramento counties
Brenna Aegerter, Farm Advisor, San Joaquin County

The workshop is sponsored by a number of California tomato processing companies interested in promoting sustainable agricultural practices.
